Fly-tippers caught by residents

by Dick Townsend-Smith

ANGRY residents in Plumstead used social media to help the council catch fly-tippers who had dumped an old mattress.

They took photographs of two fly-tippers in action on the corner of Piedmont Road and Brewery Road, and their van parked nearby. They then reported them to the council via Twitter.

The council's environmental enforcement team swung into action, and began a painstaking 18-hour operation to identify the fly-tippers and link the van to them. They discovered the van belonged to a leasing company and had already been sold on twice.

Officers then traced the van's driver and the registered keeper. The directors of the company admitted the offence, and asked for the matter to be settled out of court. The council agreed and imposed a penalty of £488 to cover the cost of the investigation, removing the rubbish and serving five legal notices.

Around 100 people showed interest in the Facebook post on the fly-tipping and it was shared 51 times as a means of 'naming and shaming' in just a few hours. One local said: "Quite clearly this shows the level of concern of residents who have to put up with such anti-social behaviour on a daily basis."

Fly-tippers could face tougher penalties after new legislation that came into force in April makes it easier for enforcement officers to crack down on them.

Cllr Jackie Smith, the council's cabinet member for community safety and environment, said: "It's great news that our enforcement officers are using their new legal powers to crack down

Bus shelters needed at new superstore

I AM writing this letter because of a serious problem for people who travel by bus to Sainsbury's new store at Charlton Riverside. This store has only been open for a couple of weeks and this problem has been badly overlooked i.e. there are no bus shelters either side of the road. I recently stood waiting for a bus with some others when it absolutely poured with rain - consequently we got soaked and so did our shopping. I think this is a serious problem for anyone who travels to this store by bus with the winter months ahead. I have already spoken to one of the staff at customer services, I was asked to leave my name and phone number, which I did, she said it would be passed on. (I wonder to who?). I hope that something will be done before winter sets in.

Charles. E. Mann

● The council contacted Transport for London (TfL) to raise this issue. A TfL spokesperson said: "Transport for London is aware of the situation regarding bus shelters on Bugsby's Way and orders are currently being processed to install shelters at these stops."

Sutcliffe standards slipping

I HAVE noticed that the general state of Sutcliffe Park has declined significantly in the past few months with regards to litter: bins are constantly overflowing, fly tipping of household rubbish is a general occurrence, and fast food packaging all over the place, including the surrounding residential areas. Rodents are regularly spotted which isn't a pleasant experience as I have young children regularly using the park. With the increased residential dwelling surrounding the park and the proposed development of the athletics track, how will these issues be managed? The only people I've ever seen clean the parks are the park friends volunteers who do a fantastic job.

Lan-Anh Bui, Eltham

● A council spokesperson said: "Sutcliffe Park is a very popular park and holds a Green Flag accreditation. This means it's judged to be a park that serves the community well, exceeds expected standards of cleanliness, supports environmental issues and provides a welcoming environment. It's used by a large number of diverse groups and this has especially so in hot weather. The consequence of this is that on occasion, the bins could be full, and litter could accumulate. Whilst the regular inspections by our mobile parks ranger team have not found there to be a persistent problem we will increase these patrols and provide staff to remove additional rubbish. We have not received complaints about rodents but people can report any issues to parks@royalgreenwich.gov.uk or telephone 020 8921 6885.

Fly-tipping frustrations

I FELT compelled to write about fly-tipping, an issue that I feel is becoming extremely disconcerting. I work in a local primary school and am constantly reporting waste being dumped around the fences and surrounding roads. This ranges from paint tins, domestic rubbish to beds and furniture. I can't understand how people can be so irresponsible. I recently had some bulky items I needed to dispose of but with a small car, I was unable to take them to the tip myself. After looking on the Greenwich website, aware that there was a £10 charge per item, I called the contact centre. I was told that the earliest these items could be collected would be in two weeks' time! This was far too long to have them sitting in my front garden, so I have had to pay someone with a van to take them instead. Although I would never condone people fly-tipping, I can see how frustrating it can be to dispose of items. The wait time is far too long and maybe the fee should be reduced to encourage people to be more responsible. It also would save money in the long run, for the teams that have to deal with the dumped rubbish on the streets and help to make the place look a lot more presentable and deserving of the 'royal' title!

Annie Bowditch, Charlton

● A council spokesperson said: "We have experienced an increase in requests for the service since the council changed the cost to £10 per item from £30 for three items. Apologies for the increase in waiting times, we are working to address this. In the meantime, we ask residents who have longer than normal to wait to keep the bulky items within their property boundary until the scheduled collection day. Fly-tipping is illegal and people risk prosecution if caught. The council works hard to clear flytips as soon as possible, and we ask residents ring the council rather than dump it on the street. Borough's domestic violence campaign targets child victims

by Dick Townsend-Smith

THE latest phase of a royal borough campaign to tackle domestic violence was launched – and this time the focus is on how it affects young children.

This latest phase centres on a poster campaign highlighting the fact that children in abusive households can be seriously affected by all the arguments and shouting, even if they cannot see them taking place. Children raised in abusive homes are also more likely to become abusers themselves, suffer from stress and depression, and fall behind at school. And the big message is 'You can't hide domestic violence from them'.

The borough's police chief Chief Supt Helen Millichap, and Cllr Jackie Smith, the borough's cabinet member for community safety and environment, met in General Gordon Square, Woolwich, to launch the new series of hard-hitting publicity posters last Wednesday.

One is aimed at men, with the message, "Dads, Have the strength to change". Abusive fathers are more likely to seek help to change their behaviour if they are made to face up to the damaging effects it has on their children.

Cllr Smith said: "It is never acceptable to engage in violent or abusive behaviour towards a partner. Where that takes place with children in the home, it can have long-lasting and devastating effects. If those committing abuse do not change their behaviour, we will take strong and decisive action against them to protect their partners and their children."

Chief Supt Millichap added: "Domestic abuse is a serious crime which isolates victims and will often remain unreported. It's a priority for Greenwich police, and we urge people to call us if they are a victim of this type of crime or have information that could help us keep someone safe."

The borough's campaign was launched in 2014 in partnership with the police, NHS Greenwich and local support groups. It also funded a specialist Domestic Violence Intervention Team (DVIT) based at Plumstead police station. Staff from the Her Centre and Housing for Women are also based there to help provide a total service for victims. A domestic abuse helpline is on 020 8317 8273.

The campaign has brought an 83 per cent fall in repeat incidents for high-risk victims and an 80 per cent drop in attacks involving serious repeat offenders.

NO BUTTS: Cllrs Denise Scott-McDonald and Jackie Smith launch the Keep it Out campaign in Woolwich last week, inset, one of the campaign posters

New campaign highlights dangers of counterfeit cigarettes

Stubbing out illegal tobacco

by Dick Townsend-Smith

A NEW campaign has been launched to crack down on the sale and use of illegal tobacco.

The royal borough has teamed up with five neighbouring councils to raise awareness of 'Keep It Out' - a new campaign designed to highlight the dangers of illegal tobacco through education and enforcement.

The six boroughs have come together under the South East London Illegal Tobacco Network, which includes Southwark, Lambeth, Lewisham, Bromley and Bexley councils.

The network also has a website which gives information about the dangers of illegal tobacco and action taken by local councils and other agencies against suppliers of illegal tobacco. People can also use it to report illegal activity anonymously.

The group has been involved in several high profile operations with HMRC that have led to arrests, prosecutions and the seizure of substantial amounts of tobacco, cash and other assets.

Illegal tobacco is a billion pound trade in the UK with HMRC estimating that around one in ten cigarettes smoked in the UK is smuggled or counterfeit. A recent survey commissioned by the network found that four in ten smokers had bought illegal tobacco in the last year, implying that 114 million illegal cigarettes, valued at over £22 million, are being sold each year across the six boroughs.

Cllr Denise Scott-McDonald, the borough's cabinet member for community wellbeing and public health, said: "Smoking remains an important public health issue for us, and our campaigns in Greenwich have successfully reduced the level of smoking in the borough. This makes it all the more important for us to tackle illegal tobacco as readily available cheap tobacco, sold without restrictions, encourages young people to start smoking and discourages current smokers from quitting."

Cllr Jackie Smith, the cabinet member for community safety and environment, added: "People might be lured in by the cheap price tag, but it's worth considering the great cost to your health, safety and community. Illegal tobacco supports other criminal activity and has many damaging effects on our local communities, as well as causing poor health.

"We are very happy to support this work which is about helping people to appreciate the true cost of illegal tobacco to them and their children in terms of health and crime."

Right to buy fraudster convicted

A FORMER council tenant who attempted to defraud £66,500 in an illegal Right to Buy claim has been caught - allowing the property to be reclaimed to provide much-needed accommodation for a homeless man.

Mark Kenny was given a 10-month suspended prison sentence and ordered to carry out 150 hours of community service and pay £4,400 in legal costs when he was found guilty at Woolwich Crown Court on July 24.

The royal borough also claimed back £7,376 for the costs incurred placing homeless people in emergency housing when Mr Kenny should not have had access to the council home.

Mr Kenny was given a one-bedroom council flat on Sidcup Road, Eltham, by the royal borough in March 1996. The council's housing fraud team discovered that he appeared to have left the council flat, which meant that he no longer occupied the premises as his only or principal home. A Notice to Quit (NTQ) was served to bring the flat back into Royal Greenwich stock.

Mr Kenny had made a Right to Buy application the previous September and would have qualified for a discount of £66,500 had his application been successful.

A detailed investigation by the Internal Audit and Anti-Fraud team found evidence that Mr Kenny jointly purchased a house in Eltham in September 1999. He then purchased a further property in Welling in 2012 where he resided permanently.

Upon sentencing the Honourable Mr Justice Singh stated that: "Mr Kenny's motivation was to financially gain from the £66,500 Right to Buy discount which would have been the potential loss to the public purse."

On May 14 2015, Mr Kenny agreed to pay £7,376 in compensation and pleaded guilty to making the fraudulent right to buy application.

Cllr Chris Kirby, the council's cabinet member for housing, said: "This is a case of deception and greed on a massive scale which has thankfully now backfired. Had Mr Kenny been successful he would have got away with tens of thousands of pounds he had no right to. He also would have removed a much needed home from the royal borough's housing stock.

"I'm pleased therefore that the court has imposed a strong sentence in this case. Mr Kenny has repaid the costs we've faced in housing homeless families and I'm also delighted that a local homeless person in genuine housing need now has access to a home of their own.

BUS STOPS: Cllr John Fahy meets children and their parents as the children's centres bus calls at Springfield Grove in Charlton

Families catch the bus to loads of fun

by Dick Townsend-Smith

PARENTS and youngsters hopped on a big red bus en route to information about children's centres in the west of the borough.

The 10 foot tall single-decker is touring the area to make more families aware of what Royal Greenwich children's centres can offer including early years learning, health, and childcare.

While other London boroughs have reduced or axed their children's centres, Royal Greenwich believes their work is vital, and despite pressure on budgets, has pledged to continue running them. Borough centres are run by four partner organisations, and funded by the council.

The big red bus made a stop in Springfield Grove, Charlton, last Monday

(August 10) as part of a summer tour. Tim Neville, is the Greenwich West Children's Centres lead for the Quaggy Development Trust which runs area's five centres, said: "We want to take our services into the community and engage with families. During the day we had nearly a hundred children and parents come on to the bus."

Parents were also able to meet Cllr John Fahy, the council's cabinet member for children's services who said: "I was really impressed. The bus is a really innovative way to take our children centre services out into the community. It provides a 'pop up' service to encourage families to get involved. The bus has a large room where children can do activities with their parents as well as a big awning outside."

Local parents welcomed the opportunity to find out more. Natasha Kenny, who lives on the Cherry Orchard Estate and has two boys and a girl, all under seven, said: "We went on the bus and did painting and touch rugby. The children's centres are a really good idea because they are so much fun and help children make new friends. The bus is a good way to encourage more families to sign up to what's on offer."

Nicola Maloney who took her three-and-a-half year old twins Bobby and Francesca, along to the bus said: "We use the Sherrington centre, and sending the bus round is good for the community to get together. There were lots of people coming out of their houses to go on the bus and get involved."

ROYAL GREENWICH AGAINST DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND ABUSE

Signs of a bright future

VILLAGE PEOPLE: residents and business reps are joined by residents association chairman, Robin Clark and CANE secretary John Killick for the unveiling, inset close ups of the sign and new planters

by Simon Banks

NEW Eltham residents and businesses celebrated a new-look high street by unveiling new signage to showcase the area.

It was the latest stage of high street improvements which also included colourful street planters, funded from the London Mayor's High Street Fund.

The £9 million High Street Fund was available to local councils and other groups who showed how their plans for development would enhance local high streets.

The New Eltham Residents Association (NERA) and Community Association of New Eltham (CANE) were awarded £15,500 for New Eltham after a bid supported by the council, which also backed a £150,000 bid for Abbey Wood.

There are now two brand new sign posts to welcome visitors at either end of the town which commemorate the history of the New Eltham. There are also 12 new planters that circle cherry trees, new plants that straddle railings and a new public bench to brighten up the high street. The new signs and plants were unveiled by Greenwich Mayor, Norman Adams and the chair of the New Eltham Residents Association, Robin Clark.

John Killick, secretary for CANE, told GT: "The new signs and plants have been really well received and residents have been commenting on how much they like the new flowers. The development has already had a positive impact on the community and residents have been taking more responsibility for the cleanliness of the high street and there has been a reduction in litter."

The project has inspired local businesses to set up the New Eltham Business Association (NEBA), a union of small businesses which plans self-funded projects to further regenerate the area.

Cllr Danny Thorpe, cabinet member for regeneration and transport, said: "It is good to see community organisations taking action to improve their local areas. In this case they managed to secure much-needed funding by working in partnership and we support their initiative. These improvements will make the high street more attractive to residents and visitors and will hopefully benefit local businesses in the area."

DELIGHTED students are heading off to start courses at the country's top universities after clinching top grades in their A-level exams.

There were many success stories across the royal borough when the A-level results were published last Thursday and high achieving students were keen to speak to GT about their great results.

Thomas Tallis in Kidbrooke will see three of its students going to study at Cambridge University. Victoria Elms from Blackheath said: "I'm going to Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, to study philosophy. I love to learn unusual and abstract subjects and I am considering a career in journalism."

Fellow pupil Celia Elms, who hopes to become an author, will be going to Jesus College to study English Literature, while Amlan Banaji will be studying maths at Kings College, Cambridge.

The John Roan in Blackheath recorded its best ever results. A*/A grades have been doubled with over half of students gaining A* to B grades. Student Nina Law is going to study fashion at Norwich after getting five A*s and said: "I'm proud that all the hard work paid off".

Students and families at Shooters Hill celebrated after securing one of the strongest set of results in its 13-year history while results at Woolwich Polytechnic also saw huge success on results day, with 90 per cent of students attending university and an astounding 55 per cent scoring A*-B grades.

Shooters Hill pupil Kapilan Navaratnam got three grades - A* A A and said: "Now I've got the grades, I'm Woolwich Poly student Michael Connolly achieved three As and is going to study English Literature at Warwick University. He said: "I'm really happy with my grades and my uni choice. It's been a dream of mine to attend Warwick, I'm ecstatic."

The overall pass rate in A-levels, at 98 per cent, matches the national figure and the number of A*-B grades at A-level came in at 39 per cent, a fall on last year.

Schools in the royal borough have raised their game in helping students to achieve record results in BTec exams. Almost three-quarters of exam entries at BTec (73 per cent) achieved a good grade (A* - B). This was a leap from 51 per cent in 2013, the last year for which comparable figures are available. Every school increased its rate of good passes in this qualification.

Cllr John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for children's services, said: "Across the borough we have seen fantastic successes by individual students who have achieved the results they need to go ahead to university. Both they and their schools should feel very proud."

"I'm delighted at the results achieved in BTec qualification, although the results overall at A-level are not as consistently good as we would have hoped. Nevertheless Greenwich schools still offer a great education to our post 16 students, helping equip them to make the very most of their potential."

"We remain ambitious for our students, and we share with our schools a determination to improve still further. We will continue to support - and to challenge - our schools to help them bring the very best out of their students."

Youth cu

AS they return to school after the summer break, young people across the royal borough will be focusing on lesson timetables, study options and exam syllabuses. The royal borough offers a range of support services, which extend beyond the school day and the school term. Many are run by partner organisations who specialise in running youth activities and support services.

AFTER school groups which are helping young people to learn skills, build their confidence, and prepare for the world of work have been given the green light to provide services for a further three years.

The royal borough has a successful partnership with Charlton Athletic Community Trust – which provides a diverse range of activities for young people in youth hubs and satellite centres across the borough – is to be extended for a further three years.

A three-year deal has also been agreed with the educational charity Futureversity, which runs the 'Stride into Summer' programme. This summer the programme gave hundreds of young people a chance to learn new skills on a range of free courses at centres across the borough all year round.

Young people can also continue to get a range of important services at The Point, based in Woolwich. This drop-in service allows young people to call in for advice on issues ranging from volunteering and careers to health advice and housing support.

During August and September, staff from The Point are out and about with an advice roadshow focused on helping young people make the best decision about their future – whether it's through study, work-based training or with an apprenticeship.

Cllr John Fahy, the council's cabinet member for children's services, said: "Young people deserve the best possible future, and the Royal Borough of Greenwich is determined to provide all the support that we can, to enable them to achieve this."

A summer well spent

How many young people fancy becoming the next screen sensation? Would they want to have a go at making a short film? How about trying their hand at t-shirt printing?

The royal borough's 'Stride into Summer' programme offered dozens of courses and activities this summer enabling over 300 young people in Greenwich to pursue their ambitions and get ahead in life. The courses, coordinated by Futureversity, are all run by industry professionals and are absolutely free.

Young participants have been busy on courses such as Acting for Stage and Screen, Create a Music Track, Future Film makers, and Street Art – all activities designed for 11-25 year olds to help them develop the skills and self-belief they need to make the most of their lives.

Other courses included: fencing; chocolate making; workshops in special effects makeup; and fashion drawing and illustration. There were also courses geared towards helping young people assess their career options, with city finance firm Credit Suisse hosting a course on 'How to be the ideal candidate', and another course offering candidates a chance to explore careers in science and health.

Some of the courses have enabled those completing them to gain accreditations towards qualifications that are recognised by employers and colleges – these include FA Level 1 in Football Coaching; and a First Aid qualification.

Jordan Webb, 6, who completed the accredited First Aid qualification, said: "The best thing about the programme is learning new skills and gaining a qualification." Antonia Modeste Williams, 13, was very pleased with the Fashion Drawing and Illustration course and said: "The best thing was being able to create your own collection of clothing."

Seventeen-year-old Keisha Mushonga picked up new skills in fashion drawing and illustration. "I have learnt how to create a finished design from scratch instead of coming up with something that is already out there," she said. "I also learned to be more original and not to be afraid to put down my ideas."

Support is available for all young people with disabilities. Young people are welcome to take part in all of the activities throughout the borough and satellite centres.

Advice on the road

THERE'S help and advice on hand for the borough's 16-year-olds as they weigh up their options after getting their GCSE results.

A host of advice and support is being lined up by schools and by the royal borough, with the aim of giving students the advice they need to plan positively for their future as they map out their post-16 options.

It includes a roadshow called 'Your Future - Made in Greenwich', which is hosted by the royal borough's advice service for young people, and is touring the borough until the end of September. The roadshow offers free advice for young people - and their parents - on how to make the most of the options available.

From this year, all young people are now required to remain in some form of training or education until the age of 18. There is a wide range of options in the royal borough for students, offered at schools, colleges and sixth form centres. As well as A levels and AS levels, there are vocational BTEC courses, NVQs, and a chance to study for further GCSEs. Traineeships and apprenticeships can be a great way to learn work-related skills, and these can be combined with study for qualifications in a range of subjects including practical skills, English and maths.

The roadshow, 'Your Future - Made in Greenwich', offers young people a chance to meet with specialist advisers to discuss education and training options.

Young people can also get advice from careers advisers in schools, or from The Point, the one-stop service for young people, based in Woolwich.

● For more details on post-16 options including full details of the schools, colleges and other centres providing courses in the royal borough, visit www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/yourfuture

SCENE

We're live in 3...2...

A NEW local radio station is about to hit the airwaves and broadcaster Duncan Martin reckons one of the highlights of Maritime Radio will be a live broadcast of Charlton Live.

The radio show gives listeners exclusive interviews with Charlton Athletic players and managers, features with special guests, opinions of fans and more. It's currently a subscription service as the show is broadcast on CAFC Player. A shortened podcast version is also available online.

However, Maritime Radio will be offering it on FM when the station launches on August 29. Local broadcasters Duncan Martin and Robert Gray are behind the new station. Robert is well known for his recent television programme, The Greenwich Show.

Programme director Duncan said: "Charlton has a massive following and the show is very popular as a podcast so on FM it's going to be huge. It means you're going to be able to listen without having to be online. You could be in the car or wherever you are locally you can listen to it completely free of charge on FM. It's going to be great."

Louis Mendez, a Charlton Live presenter, said: "It's been on Charlton's own website for the last four, five years. It's an established show, it's been out under subscription service and now we're going free to air. So we'll get many more listeners, which is brilliant for Charlton Live."

When Maritime Radio airs, Charlton Live will be on every Sunday from 7pm to 8.30pm.

The station will feature local news and a mix of music presented by professional broadcasters but local people are encouraged to get involved. There are also advertising and sponsorship opportunities available to local businesses. It's a trial broadcast which airs from studios in Greenwich from August 29 to September 25 on 87.9FM.

Depending on how successful it proves, Duncan and Robert will decide whether to apply for a full-time licence.

The programming follows positive feedback on their plans for the station's shows.

LISTEN UP: broadcasters Duncan and Robert get prepared in the studio

"We've been re-assured that everything we're doing has been what people want. On social media, everyone's been jumping on board by retweeting and sharing the stuff that we've been putting out."

"We've had a lot of positive reaction so we haven't had to change too much, which is good," said Duncan.

SIR Robin Knox-Johnson (pictured far right) the first person to sail non-stop around the world single-handedly, was aboard the Cutty Sark in Greenwich last Wednesday (August 12) to greet the millionth visitor since she reopened. Since she reopened after her full restoration following a devastating fire three years ago, the famous tea clipper has attracted visitors from all over the world.
Sir Robin met the millionth visitors Kathleen and Greg Thompson from Essex, who had come with their three grandchildren. They were presented with a new book about the ship and a free year's membership of Royal Museums Greenwich.

The ship reopened to the public in April 2012 after a six-year conservation project. She was built in 1869 to carry tea cargoes from the Far East. She was brought to Greenwich as an icon of the bygone era of sail, and a memorial to the Merchant Navy. Her Patron is HRH The Duke of Edinburgh.

BIDDING FOR PROPERTIES

People on the Housing register are able to bid for all properties, regardless of their banding. You must be eligible for the size of property and bids will be considered in the following order:

First Band A, followed by Band B both in priority date order. Those in Band C will then be considered in registration date order.

Please note that there will still be some properties with age restrictions so only people of this age group can apply for these.

BAND

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the Royal Borough of Greenwich must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.

Young people learn leadership skills

SIXTY young people joined the royal borough's deputy leader and cabinet member for children and young people, Cllr John Fahy, at the annual Youth Leadership Empowerment Conference (YLEC) earlier this month (Aug 8). YLEC was hosted by the MAD:LOVE Foundation, a community interest organisation, in association with The Link Thamesmead. It involved young people aged 13-22, who explored various aspects of leadership through seminars, workshops, exhibitions, team presentations, mentoring and networking. This event aimed to ensure that young leaders are energised and motivated to rise in the community and take their place as leaders of the future.

disabilities and long-term health conditions could join in - with all necessary equipment provided.

Activities on offer included football with Charlton Athletic Community Trust (CACT), wheelchair tennis with South London Special League, judo, BMX adapted cycling, short tennis, boccia, new age curling, adapted rowing, and seated volleyball along with health and fitness activities and seated exercise from Active for Health and BETTER.

Special guests Ben Quilter, a judo bronze medallist, and wheelchair rugby paralympian Andy Barrow, took part in a question and answer session as well as offering advice and support.

The Greenwich Change4Life Summer Roadshow ran additional family activities while giving families advice on how easy it is to eat healthily and be more active.

Cllr Denise Scott-

McDonald, the council's cabinet member for community wellbeing and public health, said: "This was a great day, with a really relaxed and welcoming atmosphere. It offered an excellent chance for people to try out new activities and it was clear that everyone there - young and old - had an enjoyable time.

"A key aim of the event is to signpost people towards the physical activity and sporting opportunities that are available in the borough throughout the year, and I know that many, many people came away from Sunday's event with greater knowledge of the opportunities that are available, and the support that exists in the borough to enable people to take part.

"To have the Change for Life Roadshow running alongside the activity day was a welcome addition this year and a real attraction on the day."
